1	Summary	General	General	Whilst the title includes management and support for people with dementia and their carers the recommendations seem to be much more focused more on diagnosis, assessment and conditions management and does not give enough focus to long term post diagnosis support. We would have liked to see a greater focus on support for daily living for the person with dementia and their carers including opportunities for a review of this support. Given that there are also quality standards in existence in relation to this it might be helpful to make further reference to this in the text. At present the dementia guidance, quality standards and links between these are a bit unclear.

2	Summary	Page 1	Box	The guideline covers - this should also include housing professionals who also support people with dementia
3	Summary	Page 3	Line 27	While the introduction talks about the importance of coordinating care between different services (a key feature to support people with dementia and their carers) there is little in the guideline that addresses this aspect though there is much more on the training aspects and support for carers. We note that the named person is the opportunity to facilitate this coordination, but we would like to see this section expanded a little even if it might be by reference to other NICE guidelines on the coordination of care and support.
4	Summary	Page 4	Line 4 - 5	It is important that people with dementia can get the housing as well as the care and support needed
5	Summary	Page 8	Line 6 to 7	Should add housing professionals and add a section to this list which refers to the suitability of their housing since this should be a part of the assessment. We suggest the following – an assessment of their housing suitability and any plans to make the home more suitable.
6	Summary	Page 9	Line 11	We are pleased to see a reference to considering a person’s preference for their ‘place of care’ and ‘place of death’. We feel it would be better to talk about where people live so perhaps say a preference for where they want to live and die – rather than their place of care and death. After all, in many cases this will be the person’s own home. Who calls their own home a place for care?
7	Summary	Page 27	Line 4 and 13	We would like to add housing support staff as well as care staff many of whom support people with dementia and would also benefit from training. Indeed, in this section where it talks of health and care staff we would like to add housing staff at every reference point.
